

Shifting Your Mindset on Leadership and Relationships

Embracing Openness, Collaboration, Connection, Respect and Heart

In an era where the dynamics of the workplace are continually evolving, the traditional highly directive styles of leadership are increasingly being challenged. Leaders today are recognizing the importance of fostering environments that promote openness, collaboration, connection, respect and heart (love). This paradigm shift represents a significant departure from authoritative leadership models to more inclusive and empowering approaches. David Town will share insights on his book entitled “Don’t Mistake Presence for Performance. Discover How Effective Leaders Manage Remote and Hybrid Work Environments”.

This session will be of value for anyone who wants to consider strategies for influencing the behaviour of others, whether it is in a company environment, a volunteer role, or in personal relationships. David will share his thoughts on how to enhance collaboration, build stronger relationships, foster connection and show respect for different points of view.
